The news you're presented with is the news that someone else wants you to know, not what's really happening. Not all news is bad, and I'm not suggesting you become disinterested in the world around you. However, your attention is a valuable asset. If staying informed on current international event matters to you, limit your news consumption to times where you're stuck and can't do anything else, like listening to NPR during your daily commute.

14 Reasons to Ignore the News | WordStream

Explain the background or the details of the bad news. People always want to know why. Make sure you stick to the facts here and skip the unnecessary extra detail or excuses, just clearly and directly give a couple of reasons the situation is happening. Keep it simple, honest and factual.

By Brian Ainsley Horn. One good way to increase brand awareness is by being featured in the news. Many people still get their community information from the local news, so it's always effective for a company to direct attention to their business by coming out on the local news. However, news stations need to make sure that the business offers something interesting and relevant - overall, something newsworthy.
