The Rotters' Club is a 2001 novel by British author Jonathan Coe. It is set in Birmingham during the 1970s, and inspired by the author's experiences at King Edward's School, Birmingham. The title is taken from the album The Rotters' Club by experimental rock band Hatfield and the North. The book was followed by two sequels.

The Rotters' Club (novel) - Wikipedia

The Rotter's Club is a great rollercoaster ride of emotions, full of moving moments and great humor. Coe's prose is fresh and precise as usual, but what makes his work stand out is his incredible ability to capture insightful moments so perfectly, something which many novelists struggle to do over hundreds of pages, but which Coe sometimes manages in a few mere sentences.

The Rotter's Club is Jonathan Coe's attempt at writing a coming of age tale. However this is Jonathan Coe and he manages to turn this seemingly innocent plot into a political allegory of sorts.

The Rotters' Club by Jonathan Coe - Goodreads

The Rotters' Club has been adapted for BBC radio by Simon Littlefield, for BBC television by Dick Clement and Ian La Frenais, and for the stage by Richard Cameron. Richard Cameron's version, staged at the Birmingham Rep in 2016, was a major inspiration for my novel Middle England.

A review of the contemporary literary novel The Rotters' Club by Jonathan Coe. Image Credit: Shella Thomson / Creative Commons. Jonathan Coe's comic novels have always tended towards a class-conscious blend of satire, humour and heart, and nowhere is this better exhibited than in The Rotters' Club, a story of bell-bottomed blood brothers navigating puberty and experiencing the world through the blinkered prism of teenage peepers.

"Please, God . . . if there's a next life, let me write as well as Jonathan Coe. The Rotters' Club offers a thick slice of seventies Birmingham-sharp, acerbic, and menacingly true; a sad, funny, thoroughly engaging look at compromise, complicity, and change in a decade many of us would choose to forget." -Anthony Bourdain, author of Kitchen Confidential and A Cook's Tour
